Dr. John G. Gehring

Stricken at the supper table, the evening of Sept. 1, Dr. John G. Gehring, 73, died suddenly. Apparently in good health up to that time, his death came as a shock to the community. Information concerning it was withheld until the arrival here of his son, Dr. G. D. Farnsworth, from Christmas Cove where he is summing. An autopsy was performed by Dr. Julius Gottlieb and Dr. Joelle C. Hebert, of Lewiston.

He was born in Cleveland, Ohio, July 4, 1857, the son of Karl August and Wilhelmina (Vetter) Gehring. His early education was in Cleveland and for a time he was in a party of statisticians, employed in the south by the government.

Dr. Gehring held an M. D. degree from the Western Reserve University School of Medicine in 1885. He followed this schooling with post graduate work at the University of Berlin. In 1928 he was awarded the degree of Doctor of Science at Rollins College. He began practice in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1885, but since 1890 has practiced at Bethel, specializing in functional nervous diseases.

He received his LL. D. degree from Bates College in 1923 and was a close personal friend of President Gray, who was a guest at his home in Bethel less than a month ago.

In recognition of Dr. Gehring's achievements and work in the field of neurology, in which he was regarded as a specialist, William Bingham, II, of Bethel, donated $200,000 for the construction of one of the two large wards which was named "The Gehring Ward and Rooms." He also wrote one book, "The Hope of the Variant," which was published in 1923.

On October 1888, he married Marian True Farnsworth, of Boston, Mass., and she, with one son, Dr. George D. Farnsworth of Cleveland, Ohio, survive him. He served as president of the board of directors of Count's Academy and was a director in the Bethel National Bank. He was a member of the Maine Medical Association and the Oxford County Medical Society.

The funeral was held from his late home, Sunday, at 2 p. m., Rev. L. A. Edwards of the Congregational Church officiated. There were no bearers. Burial was in Woodlawn Cemetery.

Those attending from out of town included Dr. J. C. Hebert, superintendent and Samuel Stewart and Frank S. Hoy of the board of directors of the C. M. G. Hospital, President Gray of Bates College, Mrs. Gray and Malcolm Gray, all of Lewiston.

WHEN I AM GONE

When I am gone and you are left alone,
And none with whom your sorrows you can share,
Will you take your burden as their own,
And if you weep, there is none who seem to care?

Will you remember days I gave you pleasure,
Will you forget the days I caused you pain,
And will you leave one teardrop on your cheek,
And will you wish me back with you again?

"Two years ago that I called you sweet-heart,"
Will you in dreams—live o'er those happy days,
And will you come and visit in the churchyard,
And will you plant a flower upon my grave?

If I could only know you'd shed a tear,
How glad would I be to see you here,
How glad would I be to see you here,
If I could only know that you would care.

How glad would I be to see you here,
How glad would I be to see you here,
How glad would I be to see you here,
If I could only know that you would care.

How glad would I be to see you here,
How glad would I be to see you here,
How glad would I be to see you here,
If I could only know that you would care.

How glad would I be to see you here,
How glad would I be to see you here,
How glad would I be to see you here,
If I could only know that you would care.

How glad would I be to see you here,
How glad would I be to see you here,

Newspaper Men on a Lark

Forbes, Waterman and Sanborn Take in Meeting of Maine Press and Visit Points of Interest in Maine

(By Chas. E. Waterman of Mechanic Falls)

The summer meet of The Maine Press Association was held in Belfast on Friday and Saturday, Aug. 26 and 27.

Oxford County was represented by J. H. O'Brien of the Bangor Falls Times, and a party from the southern part of the county, consisting of Fred W. Sanborn of The Norway Advertiser; Arthur L. Forbes, of The Democrat, South Paris; and Charles E. Waterman of Mechanic Falls, who made the trip from Norway to Belfast in Mr. Sanborn's "high-powered" Packard, with Walter L. Smith at the wheel. The route lay through the cities of Auburn, Lewiston and Augusta, with the interesting rural spaces between.

On leaving Augusta, the party struck a section of highway reconstruction, the lane of summer traveling during the past few years, and was forced to make a detour through China and Alliston of some twelve miles. Nevertheless, the party, having been in time for the annual meeting, looked for 10 a. m., having negotiated 125 miles or more in some two hours and a half or more.

At Abbott village, route 149 was taken to Bingham and the Wymen Dam, where we could see the artificial lake, twelve miles long and wondered what the shape of the man's head was that first conceived this lake in Maine could be obtained. From Bingham, the party proceeded home through Farmington and Lewiston, making a stop at a little road house in North Anson, kept by C. J. Holway, and known as The Main Road, a young man, known to Mr. Sanborn. That gentleman must know everybody in the state of Maine. He never forgets a face and never a name, and all our friends were in him. When he appeared at the office and inquired about their food supply, the hostess replied she had quantities of it, the best she had ever cooked. It was cooked that better day, the day after, the better food," she paraphrased. Then she added, "but I thought you were never coming here again." It seems Mr. Sanborn had a party to lunch there last night and in talking with the hostess, forgot to pay his score; but she did not forget and proceeded to collect. It was then he told her he could never forget such a perfect day, and she would probably see him again.

It may not be of interest to many readers of the Advertiser, but they could have helped being interested if they could have seen the newspaper men, who are now in the city. The party inspected—The Belfast Journal, The Ellsworth American, The Bar Harbor Times and Dover-Piscataway Observer.

All of them have batteries of linotype, except The Bar Harbor Times, which has a monotype, something unusual in a newspaper plant. The Belfast Journal has just installed a duplex web-perfecting press and The Bar Harbor Times had operated one for two years.

Mr. N. H. Small of the Belfast Journal was visiting here to visit newspaper men, when the party visited his plant, but his assistants, the Misses Partridge and Wilson, did the honors of the office with honor. They also showed a lot of real Chinese good things, jewelry and other things, which even a man could not help to enjoy it, and it would have driven a woman into ecstasies.

At the Dover-Piscataway office, Messrs. Evans—father and son, entertained the party at their office Saturday evening. They are earnest, genial men, both remembering the other—like father, like son. They are both men of high character and high ability. They are frequent visitors to Norway, South Paris and Fryeburg.

Thus ended the tale and trail of three newspaper men out to ride and see.

Officers of the M. P. Association for the coming year: C. C. Harvey, Port Fairfield Review, president; Francis E. Grotteau, Independent-Reporter, Secy.; Charles E. Waterman, Secy.; N. H. Small, Republican Journal, Belfast, secretary and treasurer.

The executive committee consists of R. E. Esters, The Arrostook Pioneer, Houlton; James B. O'Keane, Rumford Falls Times and Independent-Reporter; and Paul H. Niven, Brunswick Record.

The legislative committee of last year was continued—C. C. Harvey, Port Fairfield; C. F. Mann, Lisbon Falls; L. P. Evans, Dover-Piscataway.

The national circulating representation committee of last year was authorized to hold over—F. B. Nichols, Bath; B. E. Esters, Houlton; W. O. Fuller, Rockland; and Francis E. Grotteau of the Independent-Reporter was retained as editor of the Maine Press Bulletin.

Mr. Niven of the Brunswick Record tendered to the association an invitation to Brunswick for next meeting. The place and date of the meeting will be left, as usual with the executive committee.

Under the revised postal laws—acceptance for revenue second class newspaper mailing privileges will cost $100 each. So says the Norway postmaster. That's settled. Look it up.

Another important question should have been discussed by the association. "Should the female citizens of the State of Maine pay a poll tax?" Our answer is "yes". What say you?

GREENWOOD CENTER

A party from New Jersey and Rhode Island are camping at "The Birchies." The correspondent of these items wishes to share the many pleasures of the island. They made the ascent of Mount Cadillac, 1500 feet above the sea; to the new national park, by a very winding macadam road, seven miles in length, the first five built by the Federal government, the remainder by the Federal government, at a cost of three-quarters of a million dollars. The road is magnificent, both as a piece of highway structure and for view. As it went around among the mountains, one can see hundreds of feet below, in the valleys between, beautiful little lakes—W. E. Eggle, The Birchies, the Bowl.

In the years gone by, before the auto became a monarch of travel, tourists used to take a sail on the first named of these, and then make the ascent of the mountain by a cog-wheel railroad, but that mode of ascent has disappeared to make room for the road of our day, and so easy is the grade, one does not realize he is climbing the side of one of the steepest mountain sides in the country. This mountain is the highest on the Atlantic Coast.

It is a temperate use of language to say that the view from the mountain-top is the most magnificent in Maine—the island covered sea to the east and the mountains to the north and west. The view was so much overcast Saturday, so only the nearby mountains could be seen, but on a fair day, the White Mountain summit can be seen on the skyline. In fact it was down here on the coast that they were first seen and named by the English. It was discovered, Captain George Weymouth, three hundred years ago.

The party passed the estate of John D. Rockefeller, at the foot of the mountain, hidden in the trees; but the lodges at the two gateways were visible, and both, built of stone, were more elaborate and costly than anything to be seen in Norway. Mr. Rockefeller's estate is valued at more than 5000 acres. If a native owned so many acres, he would be called "a poor" or "so poor" one can hardly imagine him. But the English, the mountain road, already described, he has built sixty miles of roadway on the island, mostly for horseback riding, all the way to the top of the mountain, which he now wishes to give to the town.

The party also passed the home of Edson Ford, so the members could see the surroundings of the two richest men in this country, if not in the world.

Our car traversed twenty-eight of the 400 miles of roadway on the island; and more interesting, picturesque roadways, perhaps, could be found anywhere.

After dinner and saying goodbye to our host, Mr. A. F. Sherman, the party proceeded to Bangor. On the way, the miles of highway construction was encountered. Mid-afternoon, the party stopped at Ellsworth Falls at cabins and camped. On the way, the party proceeded to Bangor, the party proceeded to Dover-Piscataway, to pass the night at the Blithen House, the proprietors of which were personal friends of Mr. Sanborn. This hotel has been in the Blithen family half on a hundred years and been presided over by three or four generations of Blithens.

On Sunday morning the party turned homeward, but by a circuitous route, taking in Greenville, Moosehead Lake High, where a magnificent view of the largest lake in Maine could be obtained. It is island-covered here, and Mr. Sanborn and Mr. Smith quivered as to whether they could see Sugar Island, well known to Norway people. After arriving at Bangor, the party proceeded to Dover-Piscataway, to pass the night at the Blithen House, the proprietors of which were personal friends of Mr. Sanborn. A PLACE THAT SEEMS LIKE HOME

W. H. Lord

It's not all wealth that makes a place, Enjoys and free—
Where rich and poor now do lie,
That makes a home for me.
With friends and poor living did and love,
Heaven from a clear green meadow,
It is not flowers, though they're
The earth and any being,
But, it is friends, my own dear friends,
In a house, or mosses green grass;
Where rich and poor now do lie,
That makes a home for me.
Where dirt and rage are not cast down,
Where rich and poor now do lie,
That makes a home for me.
I would climb a rocky hill,
To seek a friend of mine;
And I would walk a weary mile,
To see if he was fine.
For there's a place that seems like home,
Under starry skies,
Where friend and foe shake hands again,
And all apologize.

THE SILENT CITY

By Harry G. Chase

In the silent city of the dead,
With slowly steps I softly tread,
Along their paths I still and lone,
And read the names on gravestone.
The names of those who once alive
Have passed away from our view,
And left their kindred here to mourn.
They sleep the long, last dreamless sleep,
No more to wake for those who weep,
For their friendly forms no more to see,
As one who walks with friends in glees.
In quiet hours we muse alone
On those who once have been so dear,
We think of those who once have been so dear,
Beneath the sod, beneath the sky,
And such is life, and such is death,
The passing of a long-drawn breath:
We meet, we wait, and then pass on,
At last to reach an Eternal dawn.

The eclipse was watched by everyone here with a good deal of interest. It was perfectly clear from all parts of this neighborhood. When it first started with just a very small spot there was a light film over it which immediately left and throughout the whole time it was perfectly clear. As it became dark cattle came to the bars and layed down and hens went to roost. When it passed off and became light again so quickly, while their ideas of things were they were unable to tell, but it must have seemed like a short time.

When the shadows of the leaves could be seen against buildings or fences they were double and crescent shape, while the darkness was coming on and after it passed over and became light again they gradually came back to normal.

The Horreum was held at the old Isaac Horreum, where Ezra LeBrooke now lives. This was the place where Isaac Horreum and wife lived many years. VOTE "NO" ON THE REFERENDUM

The present gasoline tax, including the Federal levy, is 5c. If the referendum to be voted on September 12 should be approved, the tax would be increased to 6c.

The vote will be on a special ballot under this title: "Shall an Act Entitled an Act Relative to a Tax on Gasoline become a Law?"

This act increases the gas tax from four to five cents.

A cross in the "YES" square will be a vote to increase the gasoline tax. A cross in the "NO" square will be a vote against the increase.

Vote "NO". Taxes are high enough now.

Now for FALL

Now for Fall!

Summer has gone. Labor Day ushered in a new Fall Season, with a feeling of optimism and confidence that everyone senses, that marks a definite turning point in the spirit of the times.

In preparation, all agencies have been working body and soul, to produce the very finest that can be made, in order that complete satisfaction and pride of ownership will be insured. For they know that the wild chase for low prices has spent itself and in its place there is a definite, growing demand for "quality" merchandise—As a result, you can buy perfect style and dependable quality from reliable stores, at considerably less than you have been accustomed to paying.

But, regardless of the price, the Merchant Store standard must and will be maintained. New goods are coming in daily—Dresses, Coats, Hosiery, Underwear, Piece Goods, etc., presenting a variety of most desirable styles in materials that are fascinating and in colors that will be the most popular for the fall months.

Obviously, then, when seasonable quality merchan-

use, such as you will find here, can be had for such reasonable prices, it is poor economy to be satisfied with anything less.
